Arab ministers blast Israel, U.S. on Golan

League foreign ministers' conference on the Israeli annexation of the Golan Heights ended here Saturday with a resolution con-demning Israeli and the United States.

The final resolution was similar to the draft proposed by Syria, which called the meeting, but mentioned no definite sanctions against the U.S.

The draft resolution presented by Sryian Foreign Minister Abdul Halim Khaddam demanded an economic and financial boycott of the U.S. in retaliation for its support of Israel, and for "all necessary measures to be taken in every field to fight the Israeli annexation of the Golan Heights.'

The much milder final resolution simply condemned "the continuing aggressions of the Israeli enemy against Arab countries," and U.S. backing of Israel. The Arab League ministers also decided to set up a special committee to study ways of dealing with America's policy vis-a-vis the Arab states.

The committee, which will include Saudi Arabia, Kuwait, Iraq and the Palestine Liberation Organization, will present a report to the Arab summit scheduled to be held in Baghdad later this year.

The original proposition, as published in the independent Tunis daily newspaper Assabah and later confirmed by Arab sources, demanded that the United States end all aid to Israel. While awaiting a fundamental change in American policy, it sought an end to all Arab cooperation with American companies

The proposal would have called for withdrawal of Arab deposits in American banks, an end to future Arab investment in American companies and a boycott on imports of American goods. There was no mention of an oil boycott, but the document asked Arab oil exporting countries to consider the greater interests of the Arab cause in making decisions on oil exports.

Sources attending the meeting said that when Khaddam made his case to the meeting, he took up some of the points in the document, but not others.

The sources would not indicate what points the Syrians continued to push, but said the position in general was considerably softer than the original document. Damascus called for the emergency session immediately after Israel's Dec. 14 decision to annex Syrian Golan Heights, occupied during the 1967 Arab-Israeli war. The meeting was postponed four times, however, as the Arabs awaited the outcome of the U.N. debate on the subject.

A resolution calling for sanctions against Israel was vetoed by the United States in the Security Council. A special session of the General Assembly earlier this month, however, approved a resolution calling on members to cease all dealings with the Zionist

Arab sources said the Syrians obviously realized that they could never get a consensus on such a tough line against the United States and decided to soften their approach. Khaddam told the ministers that instead of seeking a specific resolution, Syria wanted to throw the whole subject open to discussion and come to some sort of consensus on unified acting with regard to the Golan Heights.

After an opening speech by Chedli Klibi, secretary-general of the Arab League, the ministers met in closed session for less than an hour to hear Khaddam.

Klibi, in his speech to the ministers, said the annexation of the Golan Heights was just another in a long line of Israeli aggressions that have led even Israel's friends to condemn it "The international community is unanimous in condemning Israeli policies and nearly unanimous in favor of sanctions..." Kilibi said, referring to the General Assembly

He criticized American policy that he said enabled it to condemn Israeli aggression and then persist in its systemati : pport of Israel.

On industrial cooperation

Zia to open OIC talks

SUNDAY, FEBRUARY 14, 1982 RABI UL-THANI 20, 1402 A.H.

By a Staff Writer

JEDDAH, Feb. 13 - President Zia ul-Haq of Pakistan opens in Islamabad Sunday a round table ministerial meeting on industrial cooperation sponsored by the Organization of the Islamic Conference. Industry ministers of 40 Islamic states will discuss policy guidelines at national and reg-ional levels on matters relating to industrial-

During the four-day meeting, the ministers will examine issues such as the conclusion of bilateral and multilateral agreements for industrial cooperation; the promotion of joint ventures: financial cooperation for industrial development; cooperation in technological development; the transfer of technology; and industrial training in Islamic countries.

The idea to hold the meeting was suggested at the Ninth Islamic Conference of Foreign Ministers held in Dakar, Senegal, in April 1978. It was there that Pakistan offered to host the meeting. The conference entrusted the OIC Secretariat to make necessary technical preparations for the meeting in collaboration with Pakistan, the United Nations Industrial Development Organization (UNIDO), the Industrial Development Center for the Arab States (IDCAS) and relevant members of the Islamic Conference. The Secretariat along with the renowned statistical and Economic and Social Research Center for Islamic countries in Ankara were also entrusted to prepare studies in the key areas of industrial cooperation.

A high-level inter-governmental expert group met in Jeddah last November to consider the implementation of a plan of action to strengthen economic cooperation among OIC members adopted by the Third Islamic Summit in Makkah/Taif in January 1981 recommended that the Islamabad conference discuss the compilation of foreign investment legislation in force in all OIC

During the meeting it was recommended that in Islamabad the ministers envisage the preparation of a catalogue on industrial products of the member states. Recommendations were made that they should debate the extension of preferential margins to contractors from Islamic countries participating in international bidding relat-ing to industrial and construction projects in Islamic countries. The ministers were moreover called upon to examine the possibility of sharing technical know-how in the industrial sector among member states.

The committee of experts emphasized that the Jeddah-based Islamic Development Bank should act as a focal point for the promotion of joint projects among OIC members. Later, the 12th Islamic Conference of Foreign Ministers held in Baghdad last June also designated the Islamic Chamber of Commerce, Industry and Commodity Exchange in Karachi to play such a role for the private sector.

A General Agreement for Economic, Technical and Commercial Cooperation among OIC Member States also became operative recently after its signing and ratification by a majority of members. The agreement binds the signatories to provide, where required, the necessary arrangements, guarantees and incentives to encourage the transfer of capital and investments among themselves, in conformity with the laws and regulations in force in each member state. Such an attitude would promote the socio-economic development of all Islamic countries and provide new avenues for the optimum use of the economic resources available within the Islamic world.

According to the agreement, the member states are to encourage joint projects which will achieve broad economic benefits and

Syria retakes city after pitched battles

DAMASCUS, Feb. 13 (Agencies) -Syrian soldiers pitching grenades shot their way into the ancient winding alley ways Saturday to root out diehard antigovernment Muslim Brotherhood men and end 12 days of insurrection in the northern city of Hama, government officials said

There were indications from several Syrian officials that the Muslim Brotherhood rebels holed up in the old Hida section of the city would fight to the death and that Syrian soldiers were not offering the option of surrender. "The search is continuing and will continue until each hostile element is exterminated," said Information Minister Ahmad Sikandar Ahmad.

Well-placed government sources told that since the fighting started Feb. 2, the brotherhood suffered 2,000 wounded, compared to 400 wounded Syrian soldiers. There was no estimate of the number killed. Western diplomatic sources said the tally of wounded, even if computed in favor of the government, is high for such an operation.

The state news agency and several Syrian officials said the army by Friday night had retaken almost all of the city of 250,000 residents. But soldiers were fighting house to house and in some cases hand to hand against men hiding in Hama's 3,000-year-old, alleylaced Hida Quarter, said the officials who asked for anonymity.

Meanwhile, Syria published photographs Saturday of large quantities of weapons it said were seized in raids against the outlawed Muslim Brotherhood in Hama. They were shown on TV also.

The authorities said Friday that the arsenal, including 500 rifles, 40 grenade launchers and mortars, was captured in the town and scores of arrests made. Hama, 200 kms north of Damascus, was still sealed off but the official media said roads to it would be reopened Sunday.

The authorities said the roads were cut to stop criminals escaping during the raids on the Brotherhood which is blamed for almost all the anti-government violence of recent years. Photographs of the arms cache were published prominently by the government press which continued its attacks on the United States which Syria accuses of supporting the Brotherhood. The attacks began after the U.S. State Department reported this week that there had been serious disturbances in Hama Syria denied the U.S. report.

The operations in Hama appear to have had little effect on daily life in Damascus. There was no sign of increased security precautions in the streets of the capital. But Damascus is normally very tightly policed because of the series of killings and bombings blamed on the Brotherhood. Government and military buildings are closely guarded.

The most recent major incident was the Azbaknya bombing in Damascus last Nov. 29. A deadly hail of glass and debris cut through the crowded street when a car bomb exploded near a military recruitment center, badly damaging three buildings.

The government newspaper Tishrin said the United States had celebrated when the Muslim Brotherhood exploded the huge car bomb in Damascus. The United States "did not express the concern it is showing now when this gang was practising all kinds of murder, assassinations and terrorism against innocent citizens," Tishrin claimed.

"For the political authorities to practise their right of pursuing those who hurled the bomb and thousands of other bombs...that is a source of American concern." The newspaper accused the United States of having links with the Muslim Brotherhood and of being concerned that the organization was being defeated.

"America's actual concern and tension are due to its definite knowledge that matters have been decided and that the organization which it has patronized, cared for and for which it has exploded all its resources has started tottering," Tishrin alleged.

The siege clamped on Hama Feb. 2 was officially lifted Saturday. Information is expected imminently on permission for newsmen to travel to the troubled town. The disturbance is thought to be the most serious upheaval in Syria for several years. No casualty figures have been released, but both sides are thought to have suffered extremely heavy impassable to armored vehicles. Authorities announced Friday that Baath Party officials and security men had arrested several dozen "wanted criminals" and seized huge quantities of arms and ammunition: successfully stockpiled in a major town despite three years' of unremitting crackdowns on the Brotherhood.

PLO improves arms, training

BEIRUT, Feb. 13 (R) - The Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) is better armed and better trained than ever before. a Palestinian military leader said in an interview published Saturday. Brig. Saad Sayelshead of PLO military operations, was speaking to the Beirut magazine Al -Hourriah following his return from an arms-buying tour of Eastern Bloc countries earlier this month. Palestinian sources in Damascus said the tour was to tie up details of a $50-million arms package from the Soviet Union and arrange for the training of Palestinians in Eastern Europe.

Brig. Sayel said "We got a warm reception...I can say that any new battle would be different from battles in the past. The Palestinian and allied Lebanese forces are equipped to inflict much greater losses on the enemy than in the past."

Plot foiled, Lisbon claims

To subvert democratic bodies

LISBON, Feb. 13 (R) — Portugal's government said Saturday it had foiled a plot to subvert the country's democratic institutions in connection with Friday's Communistorganized general strike. Security forces found "concrete plans to subvert democratic institutions," when arresting a small group of armed men in Lisbon Friday night, according to a statement issued after a cabinet meeting that lasted until early Saturday. The statement said police had seized

Voting bias bogs south, U.S. says

WASHINGTON, Feb. 13 (AP) — A 10-year report on the impact of the 1965 U.S. Voting Rights Act in the southern part of the United States concluded Friday that there has been significant progress in minority voting strength but that voting discrimination remains widespread and persistent."

Detailing specific cases of violations of the voting act, the American Civil Liberties Union said the law should be extended with tougher enforcement provisions. President Ronald Reagan favors a simple extension of Key parts of the law expire next Aug. 6, and a Senate Judiciary Subcommittee has been holding hearings on the form in which it should be renewed. Much of the 132-page report, issued by the ACLU's southern regional office, details specific cases of voting discrimination in Georgia, Mississippi, North Carolina, South Carolina, Alabama and Texas. In those states and others, the report said, despite congressional approval of the law 17 years ago, "The tactics of political intimidation and manipulation were not placed on the scrap heap merely by passage of legislation in Washington."

While many blatant techniques of discrimination such as the poll tax or literacy tests have been dropped, the ACLU said, they have been replaced with subtler methods such as the adoption of at-large elections purposely designed to dilute black voting strength. The ACLU said there has been a substantial increase in the number of black officials elected in the south since 1965.

Before 1965, the report said, there were fewer than 300 blacks in office, and today there are more than 2,400. "Although the raw numbers sound impressive," the ACLU said, "blacks remain a disproportionately low number of all office holders."

In Georgia, for example, the report said, the 249 elected blacks make up 3.7 percent of the total elected officials in a state with a black population of 26.2 percent.

Similarly, in Alabama, the report found 238 black officials totaling 3.7 percent of elected officeholders. Alabama is 24.5 percent black. Despite the successes in voter registration and increases in numbers of black elected officials, the ACLU said, there remains "widespread resistance to equal political participation."

Portuguese workers Saturday foiled an abortive Communist strike attempt and the government, with the help of the security forces, neutralized a terrorist attempt to subvert the structures of the democratic state," the cabinet statement said.

The government said it had detected systematic jamming of official communications networks around the time the arrests were carried out. The police had also found in the car details of "coordinated actions to be carried out in and around Lisbon," it added, but gave no further details.

The cabinet statement said trouble had been expected in case the general strike, called by Portugal's largest labor confederation, the Communist-dominated CGTP-Intersindical, failed, as the government had predicted it would. Friday's stoppages, billed as the country's first-ever general strike, had little impact on everyday life with government departments. essential services, shops and offices working normally. Most factories, however, were closed.

An interior ministry statement Friday said there had been bomb threats against parliament and minor acts of sabotage, but, apart from a riot police charge in Lisbon, the day passed off peacefully.

Haig-Weinberger conflict sharpens

Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON, Feb. 13 — The conflict between the U.S. Secretary of State Alexander Haig and the U.S. Secretary of Defense Casper Weinberger entered a different phase with possible unfavorable consequences to U.S. Middle East policy.

With Secretary Haig sounding off about the Soviets from a conference in Madrid and Secretary Weinberger announcing the results of U.S. - Saudi military talks from Riyadh, many Americans are once again asking "Who formulates U.S. foreign policy?" In particular, since both men visited the Middle East question arises "who is formulating Middle East policy - Haig or Weinberger?" The approach of each man concerning that area and how it figures into overall U.S. foreign policy goals is fundamentally different. On the surface, it might seem that the two secretaries, had successfully coordinated efforts to advance the administration's top foreign policy goal — to halt Soviet expan-

Washington observers of the past interactions of the two feel less positive. "This does not reflect a united effort between the men," stated one analyst who asked not to be identified. "There is a distinct and on-going competition. It would be nice to think that there was a division of labor on this trip. Weinberger has better relations with Saudi Arabia because of his past associations with the Kingdom and Haig has more European connections because of his NATO experience. "Unfortunately, given the personalities of the two, no such cooperation exists. They are competitive," he observed, "This frequently puts their efforts at cross purposes."

For an administration which sought "to speak with one voice", the Reagan White House continues to experience its share of in-house conflicts. It is said that Weinberger believes that the U.S. should develop a more "even-handed" policy in the Middle East to better serve its national interests. He has been more public in his statements concerning this issue than Secretary Haig has been, although, in private, the two may agree on a Djibouti mountainside, all that remains of a French military transport plane which crashed killing its five-man crew and 31 Foreign Legion paratroops, has reminded the region of France's often forgotten military presence along the Red Sea coast.

Djibouti, which is about the size of Wales and has a population of around 340,000, became an independent republic in June 1977 after being a French colony for 114 years. With the very willing cooperation of its new government, the French kept about 3,500 troops in their ex-colony, which is just across the narrow Bab el Mandab Straits from the People's Republic of South Yemen and its Russian naval bases.

Without this French garrison, the Soviet Navy, which has bases in Aden, the Yemeni island of Socotra, and newly built facilities on the sparsely populated Dahlak archipelago, could easily bottle up the Red Sea. The French, who also have some frigates in the area, fulfil here the same function as the Sultan of Oman, whose forces watch over the Straits of Hormuz, gateway to the Gulf.

According to the International Institute for Strategic Studies in London, France has about 18,000 troops abroad. The largest contingent - the majority foreign volunteers serving in the Legion - are in Djibouti. The rest are posted mainly to former African possessions: Senegal, Gabon, Ivory Coast, and the Central African Republic. Like many other former French colonies, Dilbouti has been reluctant to sever its colonial links too quickly. French remains the official language, and Djibouti's only diplomatic missions abroad are in Paris and across the straits in Aden. Elsewhere it is usually represented by the local French embassy. Quite apart from any sentimental ties, the former French territory of the Afars and Issas, as it was known, welcomes the continued French presence for hard economic reasons.

Two years ago an International Monetary Fund survey concluded that the salaries paid to French military and civilian personnel contributed about 40 percent of the total gross domestic product. France also provides about 85 percent of the imports and is the main aid donor.

Dijibouti's financial dependence of France was ; increased almost as soon as it gained its independence when its two neighbors on the Horn of Africa -Russian-backed Ethiopia and Somalia-went to war with each other over the Ogaden desert.

The country's greatest asset is the port of Djibouti itself and the railway line which connects it to Addis Ababa, the Ethiopian capital. In 1977 Djibouti handled 60 percent of Ethiopian exports and 40 percent of its imports. Its foreign exchange earnings were derived almost totally from port and railway fees and income from its mainly French Expatriate community.

Then disaster struck. Somali guerrillas dynamited the railway. In response the Ethiopians and their Cuban allies secured a sage export route to the Eritrean port of Assab. Once the route was deemed militarily secure. They improved the quality of the road and bought a fleet of heavy trucks. When the railway line reopened a year later, Assab was functioning well and the volume of traffic with Diibouti was much lower than its pre-war level.

If this was not disaster enough, Dijibouti also found itself looking after about 50,000 war refugees — more than 15 percent of its total population.

Despite all this Tegionally impressive GNP and liberal translate flavs have made the Djibouti france a flard convertible. currency.

Caspar Weinberger Ex-Abdul Sattar aides face probe

DACCA, Feb. 13 (AP) - The government has ordered an immediate probe into allegations of corruption, misuse of power and nepotism against some of the former ministers of the now-dissolved council of ministers, informed sources said Saturday. But the names of those to be investigated were not known.

The sources said the probe will be in addition to an inquiry already in progress into four members of the council of ministers. Former Deputy Prime Minister S.A. Bari, Ministers Obaidur Rahman and retired Lt. Col. Akbar Hussain, and former State Minister for Commerce Tanvir Ahmad Siddiqui, are the four already under investigations.

President Abdul Sattar Thursday fired his 42-member council of ministers on charges of corruption and inertia. Twelve hours after, he installed an 18-member council of ministers of whom 15 were carried over from the previous council.

The removal of the previous council was accelerated following the sensational arrest of an alleged killer from the resdience of Youth Development Minister Abul Kashem. Two weeks before his assassination, the late President Ziaur Rahman had started purging corrupt elements from the ruling Bangladesh Nationalist Party. He had prepared, before his death, a list of 400 persons belonging to the council of ministers, bureaucrats and partymen, charged with various counts of corruption, abuse of power and nepotism, informed sources said.

SUNNYVALE, California, Feb. 13 -Two $34,000 oil recovery units for use in the Red Sea for removing oil and debris from harbors have been ordered by Saudi Arabia. Lockheed will copper-plate the oil collecting drums of the two stainless steel clean sweep units, according to a statement by the company Saturday.

Engineers at Lockheed Missiles and Space Co. (LMSC) decided to copper-coat the two clean sweep units' crops vanes, discs and filtering screens because stainless steel provides good adhesion surface for barranacles and other biophilous creatures in tropical waters. Copper discourages such adherence.

The two units are the first destined for the Arabian Peninsula.

Clean sweep oil recovery units are operated by scores of public and private agencies in 20 countries to remove spilled oil, debris and flotsam in bays, lakes and open seas. Some are used in oil settling ponds. Five other units - stainless steel without copper

Turkey eases curbs on political debate

ANKARA, Feb. 13 (AP) - Turkey's ruling generals, relaxing curbs on public political debate, have granted most former politicians the right to express their views on a new constitution to be drafted by a 160-member consultative assembly.

But a communique issued Friday by the National Security Council withheld the right to speak on the constitution from leaders and the executive committee members of the disbanded political parties. As a result, two former prime ministers, Social Democrat Bulent Ecevit and conservative Suleyman Demirel, and their closest party associates, would have to keep silent on the nature of the new constitution.

The council, which comprises head of state Gen. Kenan Evren and four top generals, announced that other former politicians would be able to air their views on the new constitution when invited to do so by the consultative assembly and without reference to their former party affiliations.

The generals also allowed academic debate on the constitution by members of universities and some other associations, subject to permission by the martial law commands. The communique did not clarify what kind of associations would be able to discuss the constitutional issues publicly.

A general ban was slapped last June on all political debate regarding the past, present and future of Turkey. It will remain in effect, with the exception of this limited discussion on the constitution, the communique said.

Palestinians urge U.S. probe into torture in Gaza, W. Bank

WASHINGTON, Feb. 13 (AP) — A pro-Palestinian group has urged the U.S. Congress to investigate human rights violations in the occupied West Bank and Gaza

James Zogby, chairman of the Palestine Human Rights Campaign, told a news con-ference Friday that "1981 has been a brutal year in the occupied territories." He issued a report asserting that the year had been marked by more than 40 cases of torture involving Arab prisoners, tighter curfews, arbitrary arrests, prison overcrowding destruction of homes and other violations. "The thrust of these violations is, in effect,

Strip" with the aim of opening up more areas for Israeli settlers, he said. Zogby was critical of the section on the occupied territories in the State Department's latest compilation of country reports on human rights, released earlier this week. The U.S. findings "often understate the intensity or severity of Israeli violations, or present them in so ambiguous a manner as to obscure the seriousness of the human rights situation of the Palestinians living under Israeli military rule," he said.

Zogby called for an "independent congressional investigation" into the human rights situation in the occupied territories.

OAU decision a defeat for Goukouni

NAIROBI, Feb. 13 (AP) — The Organization of African Unity made some decisions on the Western Sahara and Chad this week which gave King Hassan of Morocco an important victory and Chadian President Goukouni Oueddi a defeat.

The OAU decisions at separate meetings in Nairobi centered on negotiating peace in the Western Sahara and Chad, two of the major trouble spots of Africa. But African and Western diplomats said they don't foresee an end to fighting in either of the war-torn

The OAU demanded that Goukouni negotiate with his arch-enemy former Defense Minister Hissene Habre, to end the lengthy civil war in Chad. But it decided Morocco did not have to negotiate directly on the ceasefire and referendum in the Western Sahara with the Polisario Front which it refuses to recognize.

Goukouni, who has refused to negotiate with Habre stormed out of an OAU meeting early Thursday after hearing that African leaders had agreed on a peace plan for Chad starting with a ceasefire.

The OAU warned Goukouni that it would withdraw its peacekeeping force if Chad rejected the peace plan. It calls for the adoption of a constitution in April, presidential elections in June and a final pullout of OAU troops by June 30.

The OAU sent peacekeeping troops into Chad last December after Goukouni requested Libyan troops which had been in the country for a year to leave.

Jordan into arms deal

AMMAN, Feb. 13 (Agencies) — United States Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger failed to win any Jordanian commitment to buy U.S. weapons, or an indication that Amman would stop buying Soviet arms, he admitted at the end of a 72-hour visit here.

Speaking to the press on his departure for Munich at the close of a three-day official visit, Weinberger said that Jordanian officials had made no request for weapons and said nothing that gave the impression they planned to switch arms suppliers.

However, Weinberger said that he had discussed Jordan's arms requirements during his visit. An American source close to the defense secretary said Friday that Washington hoped to become Jordan's main arms supplier, to strengthen what he termed 20 years' of mutual confidence.

Weinberger was winding up a Middle East tour which also took him to Saudi Arabia and

The Reagan administration is ready to ask Congress to authorize the sale of U.S.-made Hawk mobile anti-aircraft missiles and F-16 fighters to Jordan, sources close to Weinberger said. to discourage King Hussein from buying anti-aircraft missiles from the Soviet Union and proposed instead an advanced model of Hawk missiles Jordan already has. King Hussein has since said that he had already signed a contract for buying missiles from the Soviet Union. Observers noted it was unlikely that the king who is anxious to maintain good relations with the Soviet Union, would cancel this contract.

Meanwhile, in Tel Aviv, Israeli Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir said Friday that if the United States sold F-16 fighter aircraft and Hawk missiles to Jordan, it would amount to a direct threat to the security of Israel. The minister was reacting Friday in an interview with the Israeli army radio to statements attributed to a senior official traveling in the Middle East with U.S. Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger Wednesday. Shamir said he hoped the statements that the U.S. was considering such sales did not represent the policy of the U.S. administ-

Mubarak urges birth rate cut

CAIRO, Feb. 13 (R) - President Hosni Mubarak said Saturday that if Egypt's population continued to grow at its present high rate, it could wreck the country's chances for economic recovery.

Muoarak, addressing a conference of experts convened to find a solution to Egypt's economic ills, urged that priority be given to the problem posed by a 1.3 million annual population growth rate. "The present rate of population increase obstructs economic development and shatters our hopes for securing a prosperous life for every Egyptian,"

Mubarak said Egypt's population, estimated last month at 44 million, would reach 70 million by the year 2000 and double in the following 25 years. This would cripple any effort to provide sufficient food, employment, health, education and other services for all Egyptians, the 53-year-old leader

Mubarak who assumed power after the assassination of President Anwar Sadat last October, has given top priority to working out a new five-year economic strategy aimed at boosting production and cutting back on

The three-day conference of some 30 politicians and economic experts is likely to set the trends for the country's economy in the post-Sadat era. Its recommendations will be debated by the people's assembly (parliament) before the government financial program is drawn up for the 1982-1983 budget.

Meanwhile, the presidency announced Saturday President Mubarak will visit Oman Feb. 16 in his first trip to an Arab state since succeeding the late President Anwar Sadat.

The visit is viewed as the first concrete step by Mubarak to end Egypt's isolation in the Arab world brought about by Sadat's peace initiative with Israel!. Sadat visited Egypt's neighbor Sudan last March in the first step in this direction.

The announcement, quoted by Cairo radio, did not specify the length of Mubarak's visit and this was taken as an indication it may be brief, perhaps one day. It said the visit was "in response to an invitation by Sultan Qaboos of Oman."

South Yemen alleges plot

ADEN, Feb. 13 (AP) - A group of terrorists sent by an unnamed foreign country to bomb economic and oil installations in South Yemen has been arrested by security forces, a government statement said Saturday.

The statement did not reveal the number or nationality of the alleged terrorists. But it said they will be tried soon on charges of infiltration across the border to try to sabotage economic installations, gasoline stations and oil reservoir and to carry out subversive activities in residential neighborhoods.

The statement said security forces of South Yemen made the arrests after a prolonged hunt for the suspects "who were masterminded by a foreign country well known for organizing training and using such gangs."

Former premier of Somalia freed

DJIBOUTI, Feb. 13 (AFP) — Former Somali Prime Minister Muhammad Ibrahim Egal has been freed from jail in the wake of an army mutiny which broke out in his own northern region, sources said here Saturday.

Egal was freed Thursday or Friday as dissident sources in Nairobi said fighting between mutineers and forces loyal to the government was still going on in some military camps. His release was also thought to be connected with Somali President Muhammad Siad Barre's forthcoming visit to the United States.

Egal was first imprisoned a few days after the president came to power through a military coup in October 1969. He had served Siad Barre's predecessor Abdulrashid Ali Sharmarke as prime minister.
Released in 1976 to become Somalia's ambassador in New Delhi, Egal was thrown back into jail again after he received too warm a welcome from local people on a visit to his native province. The mutiny, which is reported to have resulted in 85 dead and 105 wounded, broke out after the alleged execution of 11 government officials, including some senior army officers, who were suspected of collaborating with a dissident relations between official "allies" Greece and Turkey have taken a sudden turn for the worse, following a new series of petty incidents in the Aegean Sea.

Weinberger fails to woo Petty incidents worsen Greek-Turkish relations

On Wednesday the Greek government lodged a formal protest in Ankara over what it termed a "violation of Greek territorial waters" around the eastern Island of Lesbos by a Turkish patrol boat. The protest coincided with one from Turkey the same day over Greek plans to drill for oil off the Island of Thassos.

The next day, Turkish Prime Minister Admiral Bulent Ulusu told the Tercuman newspaper that it would be "absurd" for Greece to claim a 12-mile limit to its territorial waters in the Aegean. The two countries have used every possible excuse, oil rights, fishing rights, territorial limits, air corridors or definition of the continental shelf to feed their quarrel.

The Greek press has also done its bit, piling fuel on a fire which was doing quite nicely as it

If no fresh grievances are available, the emotional Cyprus issue gives newspapers a daily opportunity to air anti-Turkish sentiment. This chord is an easy one to play, as four centuries of Ottoman occupation and the bloody communal strife of 1922 have left their mark firmly on the average Greek. At the top, Prime Minister Andreas stating at a North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) meeting in Brussels that Athens was in the "strange position of being threatened by a fellow NATO member He went as far as hoping to wring some guarantee against a Turkish attack, but this drew no support. Papandreou calmly stated later that the threat to Greece came not from the north - the Communist Bloc - but from the East.

Turkey rejected such charges as rubbish. and retaliated with accusations that Greece was militarizing islands off the Turkish coast, thereby violating the Lausanne Treaty of 1923 and the Paris Treaty of 1946.

Turkey accused Greece of attempting to turn the Aegean into a Greek internal sea, and Ulusu told a Turkish newspaper recently that dialogue is impossible in view of the Greek position". Observers here believe the two countries are miles from opening negonations on their differences, and regular calls for talks from either side are seen as pure rhetoric.

However, actual armed conflict is seen as. totally improbable here, with informed circles noting that the two allied enemies NATO partners, and particularly the United States, would see to that.

But the quarrel, while only a war of words, is poisoning the atmosphere in southest Europe at a time the West faces unusually strained relations with the East.

Iran leader holds talks in Berlin

BERLIN, Feb. 13 (Agencies) - East German leaders met Saturday with visiting Iranian Deputy Premier Abdallah Ali Djasebi to discuss expanding economic ties between the two countries, the East German news agency ADN said.

.The talks were the third in a week that Djasebi was held with East Bloc leaders amid speculation that Iran seeks rapprochement with the Soviet Bloc. His , previous talks were in Romania and Czechoslovakia, where Djasebi raised the possibility of Iran resuming work on an Iranian-Soviet-Czechoslovak natural gas pipeline agreed in 1976 and halted by the Iranians in 1979.

ADN said that Djasebi and his delegation discussed economic cooperation with politburo member Guenter Mittag, said to be East Germany's top economic adviser, and other East German industrial and economic officials. Both sides agreed cooperation should be expanded, ADN said.

WEINBERGER'S TOUR

King Hussein took his guest Caspar Weinberger, the U.S. defense secretary, by helicopter to look at the fixed Hawk antiaircraft missile batteries which America had sold to Jordan. The king had wanted mobile batteries, and he was promised them in 1975 by President Ford. But Congress stepped in insisting that the Hawks must have fixed positions.

Weinberger wants to reconsider this strange situation. He makes it clear that he is merely "thinking aloud," and that his thoughts are that Jordan must after all have its mobile Hawks — and that Congress must be persuaded to sanction this.

Weinberger's thoughts have been jogged by the fact that Jordan had already obtained mobile SAM batteries from the Soviet Union — to the tune of 20 batteries each with 16 missiles.

Weinberger is not objecting to the deal with the Soviets so much as trying to improve U.S.-Jordanian relations. His tour of some countries of the Middle East was aimed at strengthening the ties of friendship with them as well as explaining his country's strategic conceptions. He was helped in this by his knowledge that he is a more acceptable and welcome visitor than his colleague, Secretary of State Alexander Haig, as well as his ability to deliver once an understanding is made.

On his efforts in Amman in particular, one has to note that Jordan has clear regional policies on its relations with each of Syria, Iraq and the PLO, a fact which leaves many lines of conjecture open.

Kampuchea struggles for economic recovery

By Sharon Nogucht

PHNOM PENH -At the Psa Depo soap factory here, the 121, workers fill up the aging vats with fats and alkali every morning for production. Within a few hours the machinery has squeezed out its last soap bar for the day. A shortage of fats and chemicals limits production to 400-500 kilograms per day, less than one-sixth the factory's capacity. Recently, an increasingly erratic power supply has cut output

The problems plaguing Psa Depo, the only soap factory in Kampuchea, are typical of the economic difficulties throughout the country. A scarcity of raw materials, energy, technical expertize and spare parts is hurting efforts to restore the economic infrastructure after the destruction of war and the regime of Pol Pot, which saw technology as an evil.

For the 6.5 million people in Heng Samrin's People's Republic of Kampuchea, life's basic necessities remain precious luxuries. In some industries that restarted with such optimism in the past three years, production declined despite government efforts to boost output.

Production of tires last year fell to one-third of the 1980 level. Sandal output fell 75 percent and shoe manufacturing 90 percent.

According to the vice-minister of industry, Nuon

Sareth, 57 factories have started up since the Vietnamese-backed government took power three years ago. Yet because of a shortage of raw materials, the vital construction industry is operating at 20 percent of what it was in 1969. The same is true of electricity generation, food and chemical industries.

Only the textile industry, Sareth said, can depend upon a constant supply of raw materials, the cotton and jute produced domestically. But, at Textile Factory No. 3 in Phnom Penh, the largest of the nation's four textile plants, only 40 percent of last year's production goal of 1.1 million meters of cloth

Union President Chhim Youleng said a lack of kerosene, spare parts and electricity has hampered production. The factory has been drawing on inventory left from the previous regime, but the dwindling stock of cotton thread is not being replenished. An adjacent factory for producing rubber sandals sits idle, lacking materials and spare parts for the Japanese-made machines.

Lack of diplomatic ties with countries outside the Soviet bloc precludes trade and foreign-aid agreements with the West. Trade with Japan was revived on a miniscule scale in 1980, and last year the Japan-Kampuchea Trade Association imported $582,000 worth of kapok fiber, aloe wood and other raw materials.

Most of Kampuchea's embryonic industries produce for domestic consumption, so the government has few sources of foreign exchange. The major exception is the rubber plantations, which last year produced 8,000 metric tons of raw latex, 90 percent of which was shipped to the Soviet Union and East

Lumber, for example, is currently harvested only for local use. "We have no machinery for harvesting," chief of the planning section of the agriculture ministry, Chea Kong, said. "If we want to cut a tree, we must use an axe; one man, one day, one tree. We need tractors to clear forests, trucks to transport

The Soviet Union last year contributed $95 milon worth of food, fuel, clothing, medical supplies and other aid. Starting this year, aid will shift from humanitarian hand-outs to long-term loans and development projects, according to a counsellor in the Soviet Embassy here. United Nations organizations, which poured in $350 million in the two years ended last September, have not made a commitment for this year. Both the Soviets and officials of international agencies have agreed that the emergency in Kampuchea is over, but planning for development, while necessary to reach self-sufficiency, is politically more sticky than simply feeding the starving.

"If you don't develop the capacity to get them off the dole, they'll always be dependent," said one U.N. official. Technically, U.N. agencies may engage in humanitarian aid, but not development, because the regime lacks recognitions.

So large-scale development is limited. Soviet aid and advisers helped repair the port of Kompong Som, where Pol Pot forces destroyed electrical equipment just before retreating from the advancing Vietnamese army. The Soviets also are rebuilding the national bank, which was blown up in a show of Pol Pot's disdain for the monetary economy.

The government has reintroduced money and has opened a foreign exchange bank. While the government is Socialist in policy, a laissez-faire economy has been permitted to develop as one of the three economic sectors. In the city, this free economy takes the form of beauty shops, restaurants, photo studios, dentists and jewelers who have gone into business. Although not allowed the government rations of rice and other staples, these entrepreneurs generally make several times the wages of bureaucrats and factory workers.

Recognizing the discrepancy between the incomes in the free and state sectors, the government recently increased salaries 40 percent. Officially the only landlord, it has held off on collecting rent. Nor does it assess taxes or utility -- except electricity -- charges. The economy has displayed remarkable stability, udging by the rather steady black market rate of the Kampuchean currency — to the dollar. But without visible means of increasing production and the prospect of U.N. recognition and aid, the economy seems destined to be stuck in low

13 skiers died last month

Experts say education can save lives lost in Alps 'white death' avalanches

By Colin McIntyre

VIENNA (R) - An avalanche which killed 13 skiers last month has set off a new debate on how to avoid the "white death" that has claimed more than 800 lives in Austria in the past 20 years.

On January 31, 25 youths from an "outward bound" adventure center in West Germany, accompanied by two teachers and a trained mountaineer, set off from the little village of Werfenweng, near Salzburg, for a Conditions were atrocious, according to Austrian press reports, with heavy snow and poor visibility. The radio had been broadcasting avalanche warnings since dawn.

"Suddenly there was a loud crack, and then an oreat gust of air," said 21-year-old Stefan Bleilinger from Hamburg, one of five sur-

"When I woke up I was lying under snow and broken wood."

He managed to free himself and staggered down the mountain to call for help, but for most of his friends the help came too late. It was Austria's worst avalanche disaster a busload of young swedes were killed by a snow slide that covered their bus in 1965.

Last year 445 people died in avalanches in the EuropeanAlps 87 of them in Austria. The Austrian press, relieved that the Austrian authorities were not to blame for the latest tragedy but worried about the possible effect on Austria's thriving winter sports industry, was quick to point to human error. "Nothing short of murder," screamed one popular press headline, and the paper recalled that the West German center in question had been warned a few years back for ignoring expert local advice.

But two other avaianches on the same day involved Austrians only. In one, an 80-yearold farmer watched helplessly as his son was swept to his death. Elsewhere nine skiers were able to dig themselves out of a threemeter (10-foot) high snow-slide.

While conceding that the latest tragedy was partly due to a combination of unfortunate circumstances, the Salzburg daily Salzburger Nachrichten commented that avalanche deaths do not happen with the inevitability of a Greek tragedy.

"They are almost always are the result of human error," it said in an editorial, pointing out that up to 90 cm (35 inches) of new snow had fallen just before the accident and the authorities had warned of acute avalanche danger in the whole area.

Other commentators expressed concern about a growing trend among skiers to leave the prepared pistes (slopes) in search of deep snow, as well as the increasing popularity of cross-country touring in remote areas, with animal skins on the bottom of skis for going

As one Austrian magazine put it, "Anyone who can't ski in deep snow isn't 'in'."

Ironically, part of the problem is that the general standard of skiing everywhere has risen steadily in the past few years, opening the secrets of handling virgin snow to more and more people.

One paper reported that in the Austrian ski resort of Obergurgl, trainee ski instructors arrived at the slopes early one morning for their deep-snow test only to find tracks crisscrossing every patch of new snow. Their examination had to be postponed. "While on the one hand people are skiing well, on the other they are not learning how to recognize danger in deep snow or on tours," Austria's leading avalanche expert, Albert Gayl, was quoted as saying recently.

Gayl said it would be wrong to restrict the movements of skiers after last months tragedy, adding that the answer was more education on Alpine dangers, particularly in

He pointed out that the avalanche record of cross-country skiers, who tend to be trained and equipped for conditions off the beaten track, was better than that of downhill skiers wandering off the pistes in search of virgin snow.

But even the best equipment is no security against avalanches. The youths who died last month all carried electronic beepers to enable rescuers to find them, but for most it was too late.

According to Austrian experts, two out of every 10 persons caught in avalanches are dead before the avalanche comes to a stop. Six out of ten die if not found within an hour and the survival chance after two hours is just Victims die mainly from suffocation and freezing. The body temperature of a person buried in snow drops around three degrees an hour, and death comes when it reaches 25 degrees centigrade (77 fahrenheit).

As the Salzburger Nachrichten commented: "Avalanche danger means mortal danger.'

Pointing out that avalanche forecasting was no longer a rule-of-thumb matter, but an exact science based on weather, snow conditions and geography, it said: "if the avalanche warning service has even the slightest doubts, there is only one thing for it -don't go out."

Japanese find upon returning home they are isolated from former life

TOKYO (AP) — The estimated 7,700 Japanese children each year who return from living abroad often find they are misfits in their own country. Whole families, too, sometimes face difficult readjustment as they re-enter Japanese society.

Criticized abroad as being clannish, the Japanese come home to discover that their foreign experience isolates them from neighbors, classmates and business associates leading them to feel like aliens despite Japan's vigorous "internationalization" campaign.

Some 30,000 Japanese youngsters live abroad with their families. Back home, they face educational and social barriers, largely brought about by limited language ability and differences in the way they think, scholars say. Some young returnees cannot communicate well enough in Japanese to enter the most competitive schools.

Que repatriated mother said her children came home from school in tears, upset at their classmates, Another said returnees "must discard their uniqueness" to be Michiko Yawata, who returned with her husband and two children after three years in California, said, "the children lose their identity. It's sad because they grew up (in America) to be very individual and free. But once back on Japan you must disappear, lose yourself."

The problem is not confined to students. In fact, entire families face social adjustments on re-entry into Japan's homogenous society, with its stress on group action and peer pres-sure, says Dr. Hiroshi Inamura, a psychiatrist and university professor.

Higher prices, lower salaries without overseas allowances and smaller living quarters in Japan all contribute to the frustration, he said. A returning businessman must regain his colleagues' trust, socializing with them after work -- which in turn strains the family relationship - while a wife may miss the personal interests she had while living abroad. "The way of thinking and expression is different," Inamura said. "The face is Japanese, but the way of thinking is not. In Japanese companies cooperation is valued. Everyone works together. Others can't figure out what he (a returnee) is thinking. Japanese want to feel as if they share one heart." Inamura noted that in Japan, a university son's life, employment, even marriage, and Japanese companies generally hire only graduates of Japanese universities. Thus, for returning students, school is especially hard. Written Japanese — with more than 2,000 characters in daily use - is guarantee employment security.

A steady rise in the number of Japanese going abroad has led scholars to question the fairness of the exam-oriented system, which begins as early as grammar school. A few universities have revised entrance procedures; others have created special high school

Worried that prolonged stays abroad hurt their children's chances to compete, some parents choose to live apart, keeping their children, especially sons, in school here.

"Usually, parents who go abroad are intelligent, graduates of good universities, and want their children to enter the same level universities. So they try to enroll them in good high schools," Inamura said. "But no matter how hard the child studies abroad, he is not prepared for the exams.'

Anne Murase, a university lecturer, said, "it is a real problem for most of the families: from the foreign ministry or big trading com-panies who are well-educated and socially aggressive. If the child does not get into a good university, it is a setback for the family."

Inamura said, "if the child goes through high school abroad, his life - university education, employment, marriage - becomes centered abroad. For the sake of internationalism, Japan should accept the returnees and learn from their viewpoint. Otherwise, Japan

NEW YORK - The woman had disappeared without a trace and police, hoping to discover what had become of her, decided to hypnotize her young son. As if in a madefor-television mystery movie, the hypnotized boy was able to recount the awful event he had repressed - he had seen his father murder his mother.

The man was charged with first-degree murder, tried and convicted. It seemed like a clear-cut use of hypnotism to solve a crime. But according to psychiatrist Martin Orne. well after the trial the woman turned up alive in California. What the son had repressed had been his desire or fear, rather than his mem-

Lawyers say hypnosis use is tampering

By William Scobie

LOS ANGELES (LOS) - Three years ago, under hypnosis, "Hillside Strangler" Kenneth Bianchi, a husky handsome young security guard who "always wanted to be a cop," confessed to a string of brutal rape-murders that had terrorized women here for 18 months.

Members of Los Angeles' 20-officer Sovengali Squad," a unit trained in hypnosis, probed for new details of the 12 murders. Suddenly, the usually mild-mannered Bianchi's voice changed, deepened. An entirely new personality seemed to appear.

"That turky Ken," he sneered, "he doesn't know how to handle women," In a crude chilling account of his exploits, he implicated his cousin Angelo Buono, in 10 The trial of Buono, 47, began last week here but jurors are not being allowed to hear or see Bianchi's performance in a videotape "trance", which was to be a crucial part of the prosecution case. A judge ruled at a preliminary hearing that Bianchi, now serving six concurrent and two consecutive life terms for murders, faked his multiple personalities and was never really hypnotized.

The decision is another shot fired in an escalating battle between U.S. courts, which are deeply skeptical about hypnosis-induced testimony, and police in a dozen states who find hypnotism a boon in the search for clues buried in the subconscious. The Los Angeles force uses the technique in more than 150 cases each

Over the past 18 months, two state supreme courts have banned all testimony based on hypnosis, six others are reevaluating the question, and the influential California Supreme Court, which often leads the nation in trend-making decisions, must soon rule on five challenges to hypnotic investigations.

Judges tend to reject hypnotism because of its side effects: twisted memories, invented stories. Bernard Diamond, a University of California law professor and psychiatrist, said: "People under hypnotism are deeply suggestible. They may graft on to their memories fantasies that have been deliberately or unconsciously communicated by the police hypnotist." Diamond believes all testimony from hypnotized witnesses should be banned.

San Francisco attorney Ephraim Margolin tells of a client, an 18-year-old girl, who confessed to murder under hypnosis, then was cleared of the crime when the real killer confessed. "She gave the police what she thought they wanted," he said.

Such a dramatic turn of events is indeed rare, concedes Orne, director of the Institute for Experimental Psychiatry at the Institute of Pennslyvania Hospital. But Orne is concerned by what he describes as a "growth industry in training police officers' to use hypnosis. Estimates of the number of such specially trained police range from a low of 2,500 to a high of 10,000.

This fascination with hypnosis and its use as a crime-solving tool flies in the face of what Ome and some other nationally known experts on hypnosis and memory call a lack of hard evidence that memories evoked under hypnosis are reliable.

nsider, iof example, the follow iar television cop-show scenario:

The witness to a crime has seen the getaway car, but no matter how hard he tries, he can't recall the licence-plate number — until a police hypnotist is called in.

Telling the hypnotized witness to imagine that he is watching the scene on a television, the hypnotist orders the witness to "freeze the frame." The action stops. The witness is told to zoom in on the license plate, to enlarge it so it fills the screen. Then, under hypnosis, the witness is able to "read" the license plate. The number is traced, the driver is arrested and the case is closed.

According to Orne, an Illinois man was charged with first-degree murder under exactly those circumstances. Using hypnosis, police elicited a license-plate number from a witness who had seen the car from a distance of 230 feet, at night, with lights shining directly into his eyes. The charges were dropped, however, said Orne, after an ophthalmologist testified that a person could not see more than 30 feet under such conditions.

Seven independent studies of the hypnotic recall of nonsense syllables memorized before hypnosis have shown absolutely no increase in the recall of nonsense syllables," which is, of course, essentially what a license-plate number is.

But one thing such studies have consistently shown, said Orne, and something that should be particularly disturb police departments and courts, is that, under hypnosis, there is "a decrease in critical judgment, which is one of its hallmarks."

According to Dr. Lawrence Kolb, professor emeritus of psychiatry at the college of physicians and surgeons at Columbia University, under hypnosis "fantasy may be reported as well as fact."

And Ulric Neisser, a professor of psychology at Cornell, went even further. "The effect of hypnosis is not to enhance memory, it is to. . . alter memory," Neisser told the symposium. "Far from enhancing memory of a past event so that it can be recalled, hypnosis makes it more likely that memory will be

Kolb, who has been working with Vietnam veterans suffering from post-traumatic syndrome, told of a veteran who, under hypnosis, was finally able to describe and relieve a bloody ambush in which he was unable to prevent the death of his buddies. It turned out, however, that while the man apparently had a deep-seated fear of such an event occurring, it had occurred only in his mind. While hypnosis helped relieve him of his "guilt," it also resulted in the reporting of total fantasy as fact.

One reason we are so happy to believe that hypnosis can bring about the accurate recall of events we are otherwise unable to remember, said Neisser, is that at this point in socio-medical history, we have come to regard the brain as a tape recorder that stores all the images and input it ever receives.

Washington? Curiosities, problems abound

By Robert Chesshyre

WASHINGTON, (LOS) — A month into a three-year stint in Washington D.C. and a little of that energizing strangeness that heightens one's awareness of a new place is fading. Some pedestrians even risk jaywalking in brave defiance of intimidating walk signs that flash "don't walk" in large red letters and hope it's true - that the police, who will happily ticket anything on four wheels that so much as pauses near a "no parking' zone, are more tolerant of aberrant pedestrians. But still, for all the superficial similarities and despite the familiar feeling one gets from all the movies, the United States is foreign in both expected and unexpected ways. "Brunch" is a great family institution on Sundays in general Georgetown, that charming section of Washington that pre-dates the city itself and puts some Britons in mind of

On one recent Sunday the main street was sealed off, police with rifles were flitting from doorway to doorway, and overhead a helicopter buzzed incessantly. Two armed men trying to rob a pizzeria had gunned down a waiter, and the police thought for a while they had the gunmen holed up. After a couple of hours and the arrest of one youth, who turned out to have nothing to do with the robbery, but appeared to be there and black, the police called the stake-out off.

The robbery hardly made the papers, and the fate of the waiter, who was said to have been critically wounded, was never followed up. Against a background of murder, mugging and armed robbery, which assumes the impact of musak after a short time — one's hardly aware that it's still playing. The acceptance of violence is one of the most foreign aspects of life.

Violence, of course, was to be expected, but another overwhelming fact of life - endless bureaucracy - comes as a surprise in this land of pioneer spirits. A new car, straight from the showroom, must be inspected first in the jurisdiction in which it was sold, and then where it is to be kept. No one seriously expects to find anything wrong with a new car, nor does anyone try very hard, but the owner must drive across town and queue up at the testing station nonetheless.

Such a requirement does give employment - sorely needed in this city as President Reagan cuts back the size of the Federal government - and could scarcely be rated as more than aggravating, but daily one runs into hassless that are generically dignified here by the word "problem", which is a first cousin to the word "policy."

Every organization has a policy for every aspect of its affairs — from accepting a check to granting admittance to the White House to report on the president - and until one has been equipped with endless "ID" material. ranging from identify cards to press passes, life is exceedingly dificult.

Policies tend to cause queues, and "standing in line "becomes a regular pastime, which in a winter that has seen record cold temperatures is a problem in itself. Whenever there is something major to be reported at the White House, queues of shivering reporters wait for up to 45 minutes outside a little hut, while a guard rings to get authorization for each individual, who must then fill out a form relating his birth and subsequent life in some detail, identical to forms he might have failed in every day that week.

A problem of a different sort is finding a house. Because of the potential violence in large parts of the city, if you have small children you intend to send to public schools, and you want to live within Washington, D.C. itself, as opposed to its burgeoning Virginia and Maryland suburbs, you are restricted in practice to a small corner of the city. Which makes house-hunting both easy, because there is only one area in which to look, and difficult because that district is not very big.

The houses were what Americans call "colonial" in this case large, well-equipped and affluent — but frequently dumped behind high perimeter walls. The previous tenants left owing $8,000 in rent, leaving everything — even toothbrushes — and the deal was to be that the owner would obtain the abandoned furniture through the courts, and let the next occupant have the house part-furnished - a great rarity in Washington, where most owners even trip the drapes before renting a house. Three days later, the tenant had been back, changed the locks and taken the furniture.

Reagan help sought against terror acts

UNITED NATIONS, Feb. 13 (AP) -U.N. observers for 29 non-governmental organizations have petitioned United States President Ronald Reagan for help in protecting U.N. member countries' missions in New York from terrorist acts.

"We do hope you as president might stimulate the federal authorities to increase their efforts in protecting these missions and in finding those individuals and organizations responsible," said a letter sent Friday with the petition. Copies of both documents went to Ambassador Jeane J. Kirkpatrick, head of the U.Ş. mission.

The letter said the petitioners felt the U.S. government and other authorities had "not been sufficiently diligent in finding and prosecuting those who commit acts of terrorism against the premises and personnel of U.N.

Though there are over 150 such missions, the only one mentioned by name in either the letter or the petition was the Soviet mission. which was mentioned in both. "We especially condemn the pattern of attacks on the buildings and diplomatic personnel of the Soviet Union, including the firing of bullets into its buildings, exploding of bombs, and the verbal abuse of the families of its personnel," the netition said.

The Soviet mission has complained repeatedly to the New York police and the U.N. Committee on Relations with the host country of such incidents. But other missions have been subjected to somewhat similar harrassment, though perhaps not so persis-

Ford receives apology from Reagan's friend

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 13 (R) -Multimillionaire Justin Dart, a close friend of President Ronald Reagan, has apologized to former President Gerald Ford after being quoted as calling him "dumb," a spokeswoman for Dart said Friday.

The Los Angeles Times quoted Dart, a powerful figure inside the Republican Party, as saying after meeting Ford last month: "Jerry's a nice man, but he's not very smart... actually, our r seatmate is a dumb." The Times said Dart made the comment to one of its reporters. It said he believed Ford had assured his own defeat in the 1976 presidential election not offering to make Reagan his vice presidential candi-

Dart's spokeswoman said he had written a letter of apology to Ford which said in part: "For this very stupid reference I am sincerely embarrassed and to be very honest. I am just sick about it... I deeply regret this very unfortunate mistake and you have my total apology."

Soviets rap Italian party

MOSCOW, Feb. 13 (R) — The Kremlin Saturday fiercely condemned the Italian Communist Party (PCI) and restated the Soviet Union's claim to supreme leadership in the world Communist movement.

In its second attack on the Italian Communist Party in three weeks, the Soviet Party newspaper Pravda accused it of flouting the principles of socialism and giving moral support to Moscow's enemies, especially in

"In this extremely responsible situation, which serves as an acid test of readiness to show true internationalism, the PCI has applied ideological sanctions' against (Polish Communists), regrettably on a level with the economic, political and propagandist sanctions brought by America and other NATO countries," Pravda said.

The exasperation evident in the commentary suggested the Kremlin had all but abandoned any hope of finding common ground with Italian Communist Party over fundamental issues of ideology.

Pravda said Soviet Communists had tried again and again to discuss disagreements over Soviet domestic and foreign policy. But it did not identify such crucial disputes as Moscow's armed interventions in Czechoslovakia in 1968 and Afghanistan in 1979, as well as its human rights record. "However, on the part of the PCI leadership and its press, we have encountered again and again attacks against our party, statements and actions prejudicial to the cause of peace and socialism," it added.

Pravda echoed the charges in its first attack on the Italian (Communists, published on Jan. 24, that PCI leaders were, by their conflict with the Soviet party, harming peace and detente. The Italian Communist Party's response, published in its daily L 'Unita, was to defend its sympathies for the suspended Polish free trade union Solidarity.

Among the charges directed at Moscow by L'Unita was that the Soviet Union hindered any worthwhile dialogue by refusing to publish Italian Communist Party statements.

Pravda said Saturday that some Italian Communists appeared to have learnt from its January article and were now more vociferous in criticizing "imperialism" and "U.S. aggression." But it was firm in its criticism of the Italian party's leadership, without men-tioning PCI chief Enrico Berlinger by

3rd World leads in 'involuntary' disappearances

GENEVA, Feb. 13 (AP) - Cases of "involuntary" disappearances are on the rise. a United Nations human rights panel said Friday in a report about what it called one of the world's most serious rights violations.

The 74-page document, released by the working group on enforced or involuntary disappearances, contained, however, no precise statistics estimating the international extent of the abuse. The panel said it "examined information on the disappearances of some 2,100 people" in its survey of 22 countries, all of them in the Third World

It conceded that "disappearances may have occurred on countries other than those" surveyed, but stated categorically: "The number of disappeared persons is increasing." Guatemala, with 275 cases, was the country with the single largest number of missing persons reported to the working group during 1981.

The five-man panel, which has limited investigatory means and relied on a variety of sources for case histories, said it received just eight reports about missing persons lest year in Argentina, seven of whom were released. The body of the eighth victim was found, the working group said.

The panel, in its initial report year ago, said it had received information about 11,000 to 13,000 cases of disappearances in 15 countries, spanning several years. Argentina, the working group said, figured in more than half of those reports.

Meanwhile, exiled Argentine publisher Jacobo Timerman and Robert White, the former U.S. ambassador to Paraguay and El Salvador testified in a New York court Friday some Latin American regimes have institutionalized" torture.

Release of Beatles' early records planned this year

Beatles' recordings that have never been released are being put on sale to the public, possibly this year, an official at EMI Records which the "fab four" decided not to issue because they considered it lacked sales potential - was a No. 1 hit in Britain for another group, Gerry and the Pacemakers. The other, "Leave my Kitten Alone" whose release was rumored year - was originally intended for the beatles' first album, but was finally omitted. No fresh Beatles' material has been released since their last album, Let it Be, was issued in March 1970.

Brian Southall, publicity executive at EMI Records, said Friday the two songs were the only useable Beatles' tracks as yet unreleased. The sound quality on both, he said, was "excellent." "We are hopeful that the records will be available to the public this year," Southall told the Associated Press. But we are still uncertain whether they will be released as singles or in an album." Southall refused to say in which countries the discs would be available.

Neither of the two songs was written by members of the Beatles. "Leave my Kitten Alone," a 1950's-style rock 'n' roll number, was intended for 'Please Please Me' - the Beatles' debut album released early in 1963.

"But the group had other songs they had written themselves and considered preferable," Southall said, "So Kitten' was left off." How do you do It, he explained, was originally recorded as a prospective followup to "Love me Do," the Beatles' first hit released in November 1962. But the group decided not to release it.

A few months later, the song was taken to the top of the British charts by Gerry and the Pacemakers, early contemporaries of the Beatles from the same home town of Liver-

Western victory seen at Madrid

MADRID. Feb. 13 (AFP) — A clear propaganda victory for the West on the issue of martial law in Poland was among three major developments that marked the reopening here this week of the Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe (CSCE).

The conference resumed Tuesday after a two-month recess with a barrage of angry and determined indictments by Western delegation leaders including U.S. Secretary of State Alexander Haig and West German Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher. They were followed Friday by French and British foreign ministers, Claude Cheysson and Lord Carrington.

On Chile murder

U.S. film raises controversy

By Charles W. Holmes Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON, Feb. 13 - The Reagan administration is sensitive over a new motion picture which portrays U.S. complicity of murder and the violent coup in Chile in 1973.

Missing, a new film based on the true story of an American free-lance journalist who was killed in Chile in 1973 opened to generally favorable reviews in major U.S. cities Friday. But the State Department is not nearly as enthusiastic as the movie reviewers. Two days before the film's release, the State Department issued a three-page statement defending its part in the story depicted on the screen, obviously sensitive to some of the political aspects of the films' plot.

Missing, directed by Greek-born French director Costa-Cavras (renowned for other political thrillers including Z. the Confes sion, and State of Seige . concerns the story of Charles Horman, a radical American journalist who was murdered in Chile during the overthrow of the Salvador Allende regime. The man's father, Edmund Horman (played by popular American actor Jack Lemmon) traveled to the South American country in a futile search for his son, and later with his son's wife, brought suit against the U.S. gov-

Both the filmmakers and the U.S. government agree on that much of the plot. The movie goes on, though, to portray unhelpful American diplomats in Chile who are asked by the father to help in the search for his boy. And the film implies U.S. complicity in the death of the journalist and raises the possibility of U.S. involvement through the Central Intelligence Agency - in the overthrow of the Marxist regime.

The State Department calls that interpre-tation of the incident "wholly unwarranted." In its highly unusual statement, released to the press Wednesday after some initial previews of the film in Washington and New York, the department defends its actions.

The Department of State undertook intensive and comprehensive efforts to locate Chalres Horman from the moment it was learned that he was missing, to assist his relatives in their efforts to locate him and also to learn the circumstances of his disappearance and death," the statement says.

and the United States. The Western victory was compounded by a failure on the part of the temporary Polish chairman of the meeting. Josef Wiejacz, to stop the flow of accusations through procedural maneuvers. It was widely thought that the Socialist bloc's recourse to such a tactic alienated what remaining goodwill

The tactic so angered Canadian Foreign Minister Marc MacGuigan that when chairman Wiejacz at one point proposed a 20-minute coffee break, he asked surcastically: Twenty minutes, Mr. Chairman, 21., 22 or should it be 23?

The State Department paper cites investigations of the episode in which it claims no evidence was found linking U.S. government personnel to Horman's death. Likewise, it reads, "no evidence was found by the CIA to support the Horman's contention that agency personnel had advance knowledge of the abduction or of the subsequent death of Charles Horman."

Eventually, it was learned that Horman's had been rounded up and killed with hundreds of Chilean left-wing activists following the Allende coup. Washington officials who were part of the Horman controversy have been quoted in American newspapers this week denying inferences of the story (based on the book The Execution of Charles Horman by Thomas Hauser) and condemning the film. Costa-Gavras, the film's director, has been quoted as saying that he blieves the State Department overreacted in releasing the statement. "If with the big problems in the world they take this much time (to react to a movie), that is too much."

A State Department spokesman said that the statement about Missing was "prepared to answer anticipated questions about the circumstances of the film." And that probably suits the film's producers just fine. If controversial American films in the past are any indication, the added dose of intrigue and abundance of publicity created by the State Department statement will convince more of the public that they should see it. Box office sales will boom, and Missing will make a lot of Meanwhile, some 50 persons showed up at the American Film Institute in Washington Thursday night for a special advance screening of Missing - but it was not to be found. It seems that the print of the controversial illi set aside for the special showing was, instead, given to the White House.

Details of why the showing was canceled and what role the White House played in it are still unclear. The White House press office has refused to answer inquiries about the incident. But according to reports, the White House requested a copy of Missing from the film's distributor, Universal Pictures. Reportedly, President Ronald Reagan wanted to take the film to the presidential retreat Camp David this weekend for his own private showing.

London Times titles transferred

LONDON, Feb. 13 (AFP) — Ownership of the titles of the London Times and Sunday Times has been transferred from Times Newspapers Ltd. to the holding company for interests operated by Australian Press tycoon Rupert Murdoch, journalists on the two papers have said.

The journalists said late Friday that the tities were transferred to News International two months ago. Their statement coincides with moves by Murdoch toward making 600 of the 2,600 work force redundant. The journalists said they were concerned that Murdoch might now be able to put the papers into voluntary liquidation and dismiss the staff without making enhanced redundancy pay-ments, although retaining ownership of the titles.

Murdoch bought the papers last year from the Thomson Organization which had made severe operating losses, and had earlier closed the papers for 11 months in an attempt to impose more efficient working practices. In 1981 the two titles lost 15 million pounds ($27 million) despite increased circulation.

Instructions to army

Deng reappears in press

PEKING, Feb. 13 (AFP) — Deputy Communist Party Chairman Deng Xiaoping reappeared in the columns of the Chinese press Saturday after disappearing from public view since Jan. 12.

Newspapers reported he has made statements on the need for streamlining the Chinese administration and stepping up reforestation. But an official spokesman said he did not know the whereabouts of Deng. The radio and the biggest newspaper, the People's Daily, said Deng, 77, issued an order to the armed forces to do more work for reforestation. (He is chairman of the party's military commission.)

Observers believed it was significant that his first sign of activity in more than a month took the form of instructions to the 4.5 million men of the People's Liberation Army. He is considered the strong man of post-Mao China. The English-language China Daily also quoted him as saying the current "streamlining" of the Chinese administration was "another revolution."

The paper said Deputy Premier Bo Yibo reported this statement by Deng in an interview. Bo, 74, said this "streamlining" was not a "purge": "This is entirely groundless. A considerable number of old cadres will be retired from active duty. Some will move back to what we call the second line, i.e. to serve as advisers. Others, those who are too old and physically too frail to do work, will be moved to the third line, that is, full

According to reports circulating in this capital, tens of thousands of cadremen deemed incompetent or unreliable politically will be ousted. The newspapers did not specify when Deng made his statements. Deng's prolonged absence from public view has prompted conjecture about his health and doubts his political position.

The government stated Thursday that Deng, dismissed twice by the late party Chairman Mao, retains all his posts. This would seem to indicate that his power has not been eroded.

The rumors about Deng were spurred a few days ago by Deputy Premier Wan Li. He said the deputy chairman had moved from the "first line" to the "second line" of leadership, and he stressed his old age. Wan said Deng was in excellent health but had gone to southern China to rest. The deputy premier did not say if he had come back to Peking. But a pro-Communist newspaper in Hong Kong, the Wen Wei Po, has just repoted that Deng has indeed returned after -10 days in Canton .

The statement by Deng on reorganizing the administration that Bo quoted might have been taken from a speech the Chinese leader is believed to have made last month at a secret meeting of the party's politburo. His speech reportedly has been read by officials at meetings in a number of enterprises

Irish poll campaign heats up

DUBLIN, Feb. 13 (AFP) - Ireland's electoral campaign less than a week before polling day is turning increasingly into a duel between outgoing Prime Minister Garret Fitzerald and his Fianna Fail opposition predecessor Charles Haughey.

The personal bias of the electioneering can be expected to reach a peak next Tuesday night when the two leaders hold the first ever television debate in the republic. Observers here expected their face-to-face session, just two days before election day Thursday, to be of crucial importance. Although Dr. Fitzgerald's centrist Fine Gael Party is practically neck and neck in opinion polls with Fianna Fail, his personal rating is way ahead of Haughey's — 55 percent to 25 percent.

The Fitzgerald government was forced to call the elections when its Draconian budget was narrowly defeated in parliament last month. Friday night Haughey presented his alternative - but it differed little from the outgoing government's, apart from some relaxation of the most unpopular measures such as big value -added tax increases on clothing and footwear.

Northern Ireland has made only a late foray into the campaign. Sinn Fein the political wing of the provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA), has put up seven candidates, but the government has refused them access to the national radio and TV network, citing legislation banning the broadcasting media from carrying the views of those advocating violence in pursuit of political aims.

The prime minister has furthermore urged a revision of the Irish Republic's constitution which it is felt would enable the Protestants of Northern Ireland to envisage a rapprochement with the south. Haughey opposes such a

S. Africans stage march defying law

JOHANNESBURG, Feb. 13 (AP) -More than 2,000 blacks waving African National Congress banners staged an illegal five-mile (8-km) march through Johannesburg Saturday just ahead of the funeral procession of labor leader Neil Aggett.

The marchers shouted "Botha is a terrorist," a reference to Prime Minister P. W. Botha, and tore down election posters of the ruling National Party. Although the march was illegal — South Africa's "riotous assembly law" bans gatherings of two or more persons - police made no attempt to stop the black protesters.

The unprecedented march from the downtown St. Mary's Anglican Cathedral, site of Aggett's funeral, wound through the plush whites-only suburbs of northern Johannesburg to West Park cemetery. Aggett, a union organizer for a black union, was found hanged in his cell in Johannesburg's police headquarters Feb. 4, the first white to die in police detention. His death sparked a week of pro-

Security police in camouflage uniforms made one brief appearance along the march route but did not intervene. It was the first time in memory that blacks had defied the law and gathered illegally in a whites-only area. Aggett's father, Aubrey, said: "I am stunned. It's incredible." His car and others in the procession were delayed in reaching the cemetery because of the protest.

David Webster, a member of the Parents Support Committee working on behalf of people detained without trial under South Africa's security laws, said: "We told the police we were going to take the buses in a procession to the cemetery. But the marching just happened. It was spontaneous."The banned ANC is the major group trying to overthrow the white-minority government.

At the funeral service, union leader Jan Theron said further nationwide work stoppages would be called if police continued to harass black labor unions. Theron blamed the police for Aggett's death. Several thousand mourners packed the cathedral for the service for the former Transvaal province secretary of the African Food and Canning Workers Union. The outpouring of support followed a week of protest, including a 30minute work stoppage Thursday by an estimated 70,000 workers.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 13 (R) — Treasury Secretary Donald Regan has said that taxes would not be increased or defense spending cut to reduce U.S. government deficits, which West European nations believe pose a threat to a revival of the economy.

"The president has not changed his mind that too much spending is bad for the economy," Regan told a news conference in Washington. Reffering to an envisaged deficit of $91.5 billion in the 1983 financial year, he said: "I think it can be handled."

Concern about the deficit projected by President Reagan's administration, and an expectation that it would keep American interest rates high while bolstering the dollar as an investment, has been expressed by authorities in Western Europe.

The West German mark fell to a fivemonth low against the dollar Friday as Karl Otto Poehl, president of the Bundesbank, West Germany's central bank, said enormous U.S. defense spending and big tax cuts would result in a huge budget deficit that would either keep American interest rates extremely higher boost inflation.

In London, British government officials told Reuters that Finance Minister Sir Geoffrey Howe saw no prospect for concerted international action to reduce world interest rates, or a move to insulate other countries from the effects of present U.S.

Mystery buying keeps tin dealers on edge

LONDON, Feb. 13 (AP) - A mystery buyer who pushed up the price of tin by nearly 50 percent in just over a year despite falling industrial demand for the metal because of world recession is keeping dealers on the London metal exchange

The path back to fiscal stability will be cumbersome — and painful for all." In contrast to Kaufman's views, however, there are some observers who believe talk of tripledigit deficits is overstated. The Reagan adminitsration, they argue, may have encouraged this pessimism for political reasons, to apply pressure on Congress to narrow the deficit by approving more cuts in federal spending.

NEW DELHI, Feb. 13 (AFP) - The Indian international carrier, Air India, achieved a record growth rate of 38 percent and expects to show a profit of 100 million rupees (about $11 million) in the financial year ending in March, it was reported here

Tourism and Civil Aviation Minister A.P. Sharma attributed the growth of Air India despite the general slump in the international airline business. The minister also disclosed that Air India was planning to purchase three B-4 Airbus aircraft, instead of the Tri-Star which is now out of production. It was proposed to use the Airbus on the Singapore and Gulf routes, he added.

UNITED NATIONS (AFP) — Moves are afoot within the United Nations to persuade the United States to agree that an Organizational conference on global economic negotiations should be held in mid-April. He denied he was bluffing, saying: "It is people's livelihoods we are talking about, and do not play cards or brinkmanship with people's livelihoods.

The CAA licenses granted to Laker to operate routes across the Atlantic and elsewhere are scheduled to be suspended Wednesday following last Friday's announcement of the collapse of Laker Airways, it owed 210 million pounds ($388.5 million) to a consortium of 27 international banks.

The staff being kept on by the busted airline are to ensure maintenance of aircraft and other key operations. The proposed new Laker-Rowland airline must have licenses to operate. From Laker's point of view, simple renewal of the Laker Airways licenses is the best solution. Applications for new licenses for the proposed airline would involve lengthy CAA public hearings and a delay of several months before any decision was made.

Meanwhile, there is fierce competition among rival airlines to take over the Laker Airways license and thereby Laker routes. British Caledonian, for example, has formally notified the CAA that it will apply for Laker's license to fly between Britain and Los.

The London Times predicted that Laker's

UNCTAD urges aid to poor states

GENEVA, Feb. 13 (R) — A United Nations committee has agreed that urgent action is needed to assist developing countries counter a massive shortfall from commodities earnings.

The 100-member committee of the U.N. Commission on Trade and Development (UNCTAD), ending two weeks of talks on the subject Friday night, called on governments to negotiate further effective international commodity agreements. It also asked member countries to speed up ratification of the U.N. agreement setting up a common fund aimed at financing buffer stocks to stabilize world prices for raw materials.

UNCTAD officials deplored the fact that the integrated program for commodities, launched in 1976, had resulted in only one additional agreement, for natural rubber, while only 20 countries had so far ratified the common fund agreement.

The committee was told that Third World current accounts deficits this year would be even higher than last year's record $100 billion and could total $186 billion over the present decade.

KATHMANDU, Feb. 13 (Depthnews) -Nepal plans to depend heavily on sophisticated communications technology to bring isolated Nepalese villagers into the mainstream of the modern world:

The visionary plan has yet to take a precise shape, but an outline appears to have been etched in the minds of Nepal's communications planners. In broadcasting, a 130million-rupee ($10 million) project is already underway to establish a countrywide medium wave network that will enable poor villagers to tune into the world using a cheap radio set. Television is also on its way in Nepal, but how much of it will cater to the rural areas is still

Newspaper publishers are looking forward to printing simultaneous editions in different parts of the country with the help of facsimile machines. Once implemented, these plans will be an improvement over current communications facilities. These have proven inefficient and impotent to cope with the increased demand.

The need for improvement of Nepal's communications network is great since it will eventually provide an important foundation to the country's massive rural development projects. It is only through the improvement of these communications facilities that the villagers' voices can be heard and their participation in the development process ensured. At the same time, extension work-

With a third quarter burst

Spurs down prodigal Lakers

NEW YORK, Feb. 13 (AP) — It was not exactly a pointless period for Los Angeles Lakers .. but it was close.

They managed a measly nine points against San Antonio in the third quarter Friday night - their worst quarter of the season. And the Spurs, behind George Gervin's 27 points, beat Los Angeles 100-94 in a National Basketball Association game.

In other games it was New Jersey 109. Golden State 98; Dallas 103, Seattle 100; Utah 129, Kansas City 114; Phoenix 94. Atlanta 90 and Boston 129, San Diego 116.

Los Angeles led by 15 points late in the second quarter before the Spurs got hot and closed the margin to 52-45 at the half. Then the Lakers really cooled off as San Antonio outscored them 26-9 to take a 71-61 lead going into the final period. "We could not get on track and we can't seem to put away teams after leading by 15 points," said Lakers' Coach Pat Riley. "I think the big difference for us was the third period," said Spurs coach Stan Albeck.

The Lakers got within two points at 96-94 just 22 seconds from the end before Gervin and Mark Olberding sank two free throws apiece for the Spurs to put the game out of the reach of Lakers. Jamaal Wilkes topped the

Mikkola sets pace in Swedish Rally

KARLSTAD, Feb. 13 (AFP) - Four wheel drive Audi Quattros looked set to dominate the International Swedish Rally as competitors reached the half way point of the event Saturday.

After ten special stages 1981 winner Hannu Mikkola, of Finland, had a two minute lead over Sweden's Stig Blomqvust. In third place was the Ford Escort of former world rally champion Ari Vatanen and his Belfast co-driver Terry Harryman. Their two wheel drive clearly at a disadvantage on the melting ice and snow.

Despite his second place, the first half of the Rally was not a happy affair for Blomqvust. On the first special stage his Audi stopped for nearly three minutes with electrical problems and two stages later he was penalized one minute for jumping the start. Blomqvist's problems dropped him near the bottom of the 116 starters in the Rally, but a succession of fastest times rapidly put him up

Blomqvust is a master at his country's major Rally having won the event no less than five times. The expected battle for world championship points between Mikkola and Germany's Walter Rohrl did not materialize in the early stages. Soviet swimmers steal the show

MOSCOW, Feb. 13 (AFP) — European champion Robertas Julpa of the Soviet Union set an excellent time of 2:15.59 in the men's 2000 meters breaststroke here Friday only 23 hundredths slower than his own national record and 48 hundredths of Englishman David Wilkie's world record.

Julpa's time gave him victory for the second year running in his speciality event at the Soviet Winter Championships in the 50 meter pool here. He finished well clear of runner-up Dmitri

Kouzmine, also of the Soviet Union, who clocked 2:19.01. The European, 100 meters breaststroke champion, compatriot Yuri Kris, could only finish seventh-one from last-in 2:22.13. Alexandre Tchaev won an expected victory in the men's 2000 meter freestlyle in a time of 1:51.81, but not without a battle throughout the race with fellow-Soviet Serguei Smiriaguine, who, though placed in an outside lane, clocked the second best time of 1:51.93.

The final of the women's 200 meter breaststroke saw a win by another Soviet swimmer, Svetlana Alimbaieva in 2:32.43, who got the better of European championships silver mdallist Larissa Belokon (2:32..7).

Soviet domination did not extend to the women's 100 meter butterfly, in which the first three places were taken by East Germany's Katlen Norde (1:02.35), Sweden's Amir Axraksinen (1:03.19) and West Germany's Doris Vibke (1:03.23).

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina, Feb. 13 AP) — The River Plate soccer club Friday provisionally suspended 11 rebellious play-

The suspension affects six members of the world champion Argentine national team, wout it remained unclear if the club's punitive iction would prevent the six from playing in "he coming World Cup in Spain.

The eleven players who refused to take the " "Seld last Wednesday in a game against ?enarol of neighboring Uruguay were provi-ionally suspended until Monday. He said the - = lub's board of directors would meet in a special session that day to determine the definitive sanction against the players. The alub's presiden, Rafael | Aragon Cabrera, has said he would try to insure that the punish-___ment be "exemplary."

The national team players suspended by River Plate were: team captain Daniel Passarella, 1978 World Cup hero Mario Kempes, goalie Ubaldo Fillol, Americo Gallego, Julio "Olarticoechea and Ramon Diaz.

The club had received hundreds of telegrams from fans supporting strong sanctions against the players. The eleven refused to Nay Penarol after rejecting the club's offer of 1800 each for winning, 400 for a a draw and 200 if they lost. The players had demanded 11 000 each regardless of the outcome.

A report by the Noticias, Argentina's news agency, that the 14 river plate players, including subsitutes and injured, who were not in the lineup last Wednesday had made common cause with the suspended eleven was not confirmed. The subs had been notified of practice Saturday, and those who do not show up will be suspended.

River has three other players on the national team. They are: Cesar Tarantini, Enzo Bulleri and Jorge Gordillo. The players issued a communique asking River Plate to accept the mediation of the Argentine Soccer Players' Association in the dispute. The players said they hoped to reach "a cordial, friendly and just solution... keeping in mind the proximity of the World Championship in which we intend to help defend the title so proudly won."

COLOMBO, Feb. 13 (AFP) — The tour-.

Liverpool, harboring ambitions of a unique haul of the major honors - League Title, Fa, League and European Cups - have good reason to call Chelsea their 'jinx' team because four years ago, an equally impressive side was crushed 4-2 in a third round tie.

Tottenham, who meet Liverpool in the League Cup final in March, stayed on course for a second Wembley appearace with a hard-fought win over Villa. Marc Falco was their goal-hero, bulleting home a header in the 34th minute.

There was further bad news for both Liverpool and Ipswich in the league when their main championship rivals all grabbed three points. Leaders Southampton swept past once-mighty Nottingham Forest 2-0 with goals from England captain Kevin Keegan, his 21st of the season, and former international striker Mike Channon.

Southampton now have 47 points, two more than Manchester United who won 1-0 at Wolverhampton with a goal from one million sterling ($1.98 million) striker Garry

The other Manchester Club, City, jumped above Liverpool into third place with an impressive 4-0 home win over Brighton. City scored through Trevor Francis, Kevin Reeves, Bobby McDonald and an own goal by Brighton fullback Gary Stevens.

Arsenal continue to find goals hard to come by but they kept in touch with the leaders with a 1-0 win over visiting Notts County. Teenager Raphael Meade broke the deadlock in the 86th minute, Arsenal's 21 st goal in 23 league matches.

Aberdeen striker John Hewitt continued his remarkable goal scoring run in the Scotting Cup with a brilliant match-winner against champions Celtic in the fourth round. Hewitt, who scored the winner after just nine seconds against Motherwell in the last round, latched on to a loose ball in the Celtic penalty area in the fourth minute and, with his back to goal, hooked a blistering drive high into the Cup-holders Rangers enjoyed an uncomfortable opening 45 minutes against first division dumbarton. But after a goalless firsthalf, Rangers were in rampant form after the interval and ran out 4-0 winners with two goals from Sandy Jardine and one apiece from Cotin McAdam and Derek Johnstone.

Dundee United and Hibernian, fourth and fifth in the league, were equally well matched in a thrilling cup tie. United led 1-0 at the internal through John Holt, but the visitors fought back to force a replay when Gordon Rae equalized late on.

In Milrose Games

Decker corners glory

NEW YORK, Feb. 13 (AFP) — Two world best times and a host of classy performances delighted a 18,300 crowd at the annual Milrose Games in Madison Square Garden here Friday.

The star of the indoors meeting was 23year-old Californian Mary Decker who clocked 4:21.47 for a new women's world one mile best, beating her own 4:24.61 set in Los Angeles last month.

Decker, who married Marathon runner Ron Tabb last September led the race from the start and never looked like being headed. The second world best time was jointly achieved by two Americans, Candy Young and Stephanie Hightower in the women's 60 yards hurdles.

They were both timed at 7.38, 00.09 secs faster than the previous world best, which again they had jointly held. Elsewhere there were expected wins for Stanley Floyd in the 60 yards sprint (6.10), Renaldo Nehemiah in the 60 yards hurdles (6.84) and Carl Lewis in the men's long jump (8.32 m).

Top American Miler Steve Scott won a closely contested one mile in 3:55.3, ahead of the improving Tom Bryers (3:55.41) and New Zealand's former Olympic champion John Walker (3:55.62).

The 5,000 meters saw the upset win of American Doug Padilanin 13:20.55 clear of two Britons, Nick Rose (13:21.27) and Geoff Smith (13:22.17), with Cuban-born Marathon King Alberto Salazar fourth in Other winners were James Robinson of the U.S. in the 800 meters (1:47.51), Bert Cameron of Jamaica in the 400 meter (47.20) and Earl Bell of the U.S. in the pole vault (5.65(.

To meet Pakistan in final

Aussies swamp England

SINGAPORE, Feb. 13 (AFP) — Defending champions Australia will take on top seed Pakistan in the final here Sunday of the second World junior Squash Team Champion-

In the semifinals Saturday Pakistan scored an easy 3-0 win over New Zealand while Australia had a slightly tougher match against England to win by a similar 3-0 marein.

Australian junior champion Chris Dittmar won in three games against Christy Willstrop, but his two teammates, Tristan Nancarrow and Grantley Pinnington conceded a game

Pakistan won all its three matches straight. Pakistan finished at the top of pool with New Zealand in second place followed by Ireland and Scotland. Australia were the top team in the other followed by England, Sweden and

In other matches, Ireland defeated Scotland 2-1 and Sweden defeated Wales 3-0. The second-placed teams in each group will meet each other for the third and fourth placings with the same pattern for the fifth to eighth places.

Hosts Singapore salvaged some measure of pride when its team secured a 2-1 verdict over Canada in the battle for the minor placings, while Malaysia beat Hong Kong also by an identical 2-1 margin in a bid to finish high in the ninth to 13th placings. -

Italy plays cautious despite Poland's defeat

ROME, Feb. 13 (R) - Italian soccer manager Enzo Bearzot won't be reading too much into Poland's 2-1 defeat at the hands of Italian Third Division club Modena Thurs-

The cautious Bearzot, whose team play Poland in the opening Group One match of the World Soccer Cup finals on June 14, commented: "Just remember this is the same Poland that outclassed Argentina in Buenos Aires three or four months ago. We had better not allow ourselves any illusions, believe

With the knowledgeable Bearzot in this frame of mind, the Polish debacle should not rouse too much hope in Peru and Cameroon, whose teams will also compete in Group One. reason for the debacle. "We played badly. But our championship ended on Nov. 28, since when the players have hardly touched a ball,"

Piechniczek might have added that since then Poland has had a lot to think about beyond soccer. The three-game Italian tour is the squad's first trip outside Poland since last December's declaration of martial law. "Politics and football are two separate things," a team spokesman said earlier this week. "The fact that this is their first trip away since martial law is not relevant."

that martial law and its harsh restraints on normal living could well have had a psychological effect on the players. The leading Italian sports daily Gazetta Dello Sport said that team captain Zbigniew Boniek had spent more time on the telephone than on the pitch" since the Polish squad arrived last Monday for warm-up games against Italian clubs. But Boniek, speaking to reporters, was philosophical about martial law. "There's order at home and you can sleep safely. Of course there are difficulties, but maybe they will make life easier tomorrow," he said.

French Rose snatches exciting win By a Staff Writer

JEDDAH, Feb. 13 - For the second week running Dunes-2 lost its match by the smallest possible of one IMP giving French Rose its second victory in two matches in the Jed-dah Bridge League. New teams Sangmed and ADS had a seasaw match with ADS well up at half-time. But ADS lost 15 IMPs on a bidding misunderstanding and finally went down 12-8. Grav-Mackenzie failed to repeat last week's surprise win over British Steel, going down 4-16 to Irregulars. Both Pak 4 teams won 16-4 against SEA-1 and Sharbatli, while CIB and Saudia Blues both had narrow wins over KAIA/Green and Mobil at 11-9 respectively. The KAIA/White vs British Steel match was postponed and IAL and Dunes-1 had byes.

Next week's 'B' league has unbeaten teams Dunes-1 and Saudia Blues playing in a match which may prove decisive in final league placings. The 'A' league is still wide open with almost every team in with a chance of finishing eventual team league winners.

Podborski bags 3rd downhill

GARMISH-PARTENKIRCHEN, Feb. 13 (AFP) - Canada's Steve Podborski, who failed badly at the World Championships, came back with a vengeance Saturday to win his third men's Downhill of the season in the World Alpine Skiing Cup.

Total: (in 4) overs)

FALL OF WICKETS: 1-55, 2-83, 3-152, 4-191, 5-197, 6-202-7-205-8-205, 9-205.

He claimed his victory in 1:50.52 ahead of Switzerland's Conradin Cathomen, Downhill silver medallist at the World Championships, in 1:50.81 and World Downhill champion Harti Weirather of Austria in third place in 1:50.94.

Podborski's win lengthens his lead at the top of the World Cup Downhill standings with 107 points to last year's winner Weirather's 85. Saturday's result though does nothing to alter the overall World Cup standings with American Phil Mahre still in the lead with 282 points to Sweden's Ingemar Stenmark's 204.

Podborski said afterwards, "I am very happy" he had done everything right. Cathomen said he was extremely pleased with his second place. "Perhaps I will finally manage to win a Downhill during the American tour," he said. Weirather said he made too many mistakes to repeat his success at

Meanwhile, American Holly Beth Flanders, 24, triumphed in the second to last Women's Downhill Saturday winning in 1:36.52 to take the lead in the World Alpine Skiing Cup Downhill Standings at Arosa.

Flanders, whose victory was her second in the World Cup this season, following a win in Badgastein on Jan. 18, now stands poised to claim the trophy after Sunday's final Downhill here.

Only one other skier looks a serious threat to her claim to the Downhill crown. She is France's Marie-Cecile Gros-Gaudenier, fifth Saturday with 79 points to Flanders' 84. World Downhill champion Gerry Sorensen of Canada, who was only eighth Saturday has 71 points and to win the trophy now would need a victory Sunday and to depend on poor performances from both Flanders and Gros-Gaudenier. Second here was another American Cindy Nelson in 1:36.80 with Switzerland's Maria Walliser third in 1:36.94.

This Downhill was a tale of woe for many. In addition to the disappointment to Sorensen and the Canadians it saw the end of the dream of Switzerland's Doris De Agostini of occupying the vacant Downhill throne left by her compatriot Marie Therse Nadig. She pulled up after 40 seconds of the run.

For West German Irene Epple, who led the Downhill standings on 69 points before the race, Saturday was a complete disaster. She lost all her style and rhythm and finished a lowly 31st, 2.64 seconds behind Flanders.

As martial law enters third month

Warsaw security tightened

WARSAW, Feb. 13 (AP) — Poland's martial law authorities beefed up security in this capital city and in the former Solidarity union headquarters town of Gdansk, an apparent warning against any possible martial law protests. Saturday tests Saturday.

Police checked drivers' identity cards in Warsaw and appeared in greater numbers than usual on the streets, tightening security following two consecutive displays of force by hundreds of police trucks here Thursday and

Reliable travelers' reports from the Baltic port of Gdansk said police had thrown a tight ring of trucks and water cannons around the monument to workers outside the Lenin shipyards and at train stations Friday and that pedestrians' identity cards were checked.

Sources in the seaport, site of August 1980 food price strikes that led to the formation of the Solidarity union — since suspended by the December martial law decree — said there were rumors of possible protests

Saturday.

The tightened security here and elsewhere came as martial law entered its third month Saturday along with a military council of national redemption to run the country. There have been persistent rumors that people would buy copies of the Communist Party daily Trybuna Ludu and strew them about the party headquarters Saturday night.

Meanwhile, church officials said that Archbishop Jozef Glemp may deliver a speech Sunday, but had not yet decided. Church

Four parties to defend Spain regime

MADRID, Feb. 13 (AFP) — Spain's Communist and conservatives will briefly close ranks next week to ward off possible attempts to destabilize the country as the trial of last February's failed putsch leaders gets Fearing attempts to upset the five-year-old democracy when the trial of the abortive military-led putsch last Feb. 23 begins next Friday, the four major Spanish political parties Saturday indicated they would rally to the defense of the regime installed after Gen. Francisco Franco's death in 1975.

A joint communique signed by the ruling Center Democratic Party (UCD), The conservative Popular Alliance (AP), the Socialist Workers' Party (PSOE) and the Communist Party (PCE) will be issued Wednesday, they said. The statement will express the parties' firm resolve to provide a joint response to any destabilization moves.

These could stem from both right-wing military extremists and leftist separatist Basque guerrillas. The 1981 February putschists, led by a lieutenant-colonel from the Spanish Civil Guard Corps, urged for a return to military rule as democracy had failed, they said, notably in wiping out the armed Basque separatist movement.

The Spanish political parties indicated that 13 parliamentarians, all former lawyers, representing the four parties will attend the trial. Antonio Pedrol, head of Spain's Barristers' Counsel, has also requested that the lawyers defending the 33 accused on trial adopt a "respectful" attitude. All "possible tension"

must be avoided, Pedrol said

The defense lawyers have promised to abstain from making any public statements during the course of the trial, expected to last several weeks. A total of 30 defendants have already been transferred to the army's geographical service buildings, 10 kms from Madrid, where the trial is to be held. The defendants were able to mix freely and ate their meals together, sources said.

Former Defense Minister Austin Rodriguez Sahagun Friday appealed for the trial "not to become a trial against democracy". But the head of the Civil Guard, Gen. Jose Aramburu Topete, said an atmosphere of "peace" currently reigned inside the army, where the troops were not overconcerned with the trial. "I think justice will triumph", he said.

Thais strengthen border defenses

BANGKOK, Feb. 13 (AFP) — Thailand has beefed up its defenses along its eastern border amid stepped-up fighting between Vietnamese-led Cambodian government forces and Khmer Rouge guerrillas in the extreme west of Cambodia, frontline reports said Saturday.

According to the reports, fresh troops and armored cars have been sent to reinforce a 50-kilometers stretch of the border which is the scene of the fighting.

The reports said a large quantity of shells had fallen inside Thailand during fierce battles Friday night and early Saturday morning between Vietnamese-led forces and Khmer Rouge Guerrillas. Thousands of Khmer Rouge dependents, mainly women and children, have fled to Thailand since the latest flare-up began Thursday, the reports added.

sources also said the authorities had rejected two proposals to allow Solidarity union chief Lech Walesa to attend the christening of his seventh daughter, born Jan. 27, while he is being held in isolation somewhere near here.

The sources said the church had proposed that Walesa's wife bring the child to Warsaw, or the authorities could release Walesa for a trip to Gdansk to attend the christening and then return to sequestration. Walesa, in messages, has appealed to members of the now-suspended union to avoid protests that would jeopardize any future reorganization.

Government, party and media officials in Gdansk have apparently also taken steps to warn youths and workers against joining any sort of protests there, according to reports reaching Warsaw.

The current security buildup also appears to be a clear warning against conducting protests of any kind, which some officials have said could jeopardize lifting martial law restrictions by the end of this month.

The Polish news agency PAP, in a dispatch from Lublin that it later killed, indicated there had been some sort of disturbance there and that the official response had been a severe tightening of restrictions.

There was no way to check the report, nor could it be determined why the story had been killed shortly after being sent. Some reporters sent it, however, on Western agency circuits.

Reliable sources arriving here from Gdansk said police foot patrols Friday ringed the monument to workers, which stands directly outside the shipyard. They said that in other areas of the city, police patrols stationed every 20 to 30 meters checked documents.

The presence of numerous police and police vehicles such as tanks, armored cars and trucks was in stark contrast to the almost normal situation viewed by foreign journalists who visited the Baltic port city Tuesday.

Gdansk was the site of riots in the early days of martial law which left one person dead and a renewed outbreak of violence Jan. 30 when a mob tried to burn the party head-quarters and fought police with stones and gasoline bombs.

Meanwhile, a military court in Warsaw Saturday sentenced Bogdan Walewski, a former employee of the Polish Foreign Ministry, to 25 years in jail on charges of spying for the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency, PAP reported.

In his plea Friday, the prosecutor, Col. Jerzfogpilski, had called for the death sentence. PAP said the court, presided over by Col. Henryk Kwasny, also meted out additional punishment in the form of a ten-year loss of the defendant's civil rights and confiscation of his property.

No details of the verdict were disclosed in the official report. But PAP said it can be appealed. PAP added the trial "fully confirmed the charges of spying and many-sided activities to the detriment of the Polish People's Republic and her allies."

16 crewmen saved from Greek ship

FALMOUTH. England, Feb. 13 (Agencies)—(AP)—A Dutch helicopter Saturday pulled 16 crewmen to safety from the sheared hulk of a Greek tanker adrift for more than 33 hours in the storm-tossed Atlantic north of the Azores, the British Coast Guard said. One sailor was found dead aboard a life raft, and 15 others were missing, said Doug Rundle, senior watch officer at the Falmouth Coast Guard station.

All known survivors were pulled from the badly listing stern of the ship and ferried to a Dutch frigate 20 miles (32 kms) away, the Coast Guard said. It was first believed one of those lifted from the tanker's stern was injured, but Rundle said it was later determined that the crewmen was pulled dead from a life raft. The dead man was thought to have been among three sailors who abandoned the ship Saturday. Rundle said.

doned the ship Saturday, Rundle said.

A search of 17 life rafts in the area turned up no sign of the other two crewmen. Twelve others were presumed dead after their lifeboat capsized Friday said a coast station officer.

The 12,487-ton tanker broke in two early Friday in a raging storm 840 miles (1351 kms) west of Land's End, the southwest tip of England. Thirteen other crewmen who tried to escape early Friday disappeared when 50,foot (15 m) waves smashed their lifeboat. Another man was washed overboard and presumed drowned.

"We haven't given up hope. There is always a chance some of them might have reached the rafts," the spokesman said. The Tanker, Victory was bound for Liverpool, England, from Florida with a cargo of molasses when it broke up. The spokesman said the crew list was not known but all 32 were thought to be Greek.

Good Morning

By Jihad Al-Khazen

"The cobra standing at my head shall spit its flames in your face and your head shall roll at my feet. This is the curse, the everlasting revenge which shall overtake anyone who disturbs my body in its grave."

This is an unofficial rendering of the inscription found on the sarcophagus of the boy Pharaoh Tut Ankh Amoon...

"Not again" you groan? Oh, yes, dear reader, again and again. For the plot thickens, and the invisible hand strikes once more across the centuries. The curse of the Pharaohs which we recently mentioned, when an American magazine explained such seemingly disparate events as Sadat's death, the San Francisco earthquake, and the Watergate disaster by reference to the ancient curse, which took care of almost everyone who had to do with the organization of the "Tut Exhibition."

At that time many of you thought the idea unlikely, and I must confess that I too was a bit skeptical. But that was before I knew the story was by no means over, with a new victim coming to the fore, and a court claim against the organizers of the exhibition made. Soon we might have a court ruling officially recognizing the power of the ancient curse.

The claimant is a San Francisco policeman who had to stand guard on the Boy Pharaoh's death mask, who says he was hail and hearty up to the minute he went to stand duty. But it took only a short time of it for him to keel over in a heart attack. There's no reason for it, he argues, but the Pharaoh's curse.

His lawyer told the court it would be unfair to dismiss the claim out of hand, as he had read 40 books on the subject, each of them chock a block with mysterious and terrible events which can only be explained through the curse. So why not see reason and give his client the money,

But the lawyer is no fool. He has already prepared another line of defense in case the court orders his head be examined. This is a doctor's certificate saying that his client's heart attack was the result of "stress caused by guarding the exhibition." So the court might take this softer option and official recognition of the curse to the Pharaohs remains withdrawn.

In Salvador combat zone

U.S. defends armed advisers AMMAN, Feb. 13 (Agencies) — Five U.S. American state.

AMMAN, Feb. 13 (Agencies) — Five U.S. military advisers shown on television in the United States carrying rifles in a combat zone of El Salvador were defended by U.S. Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger Saturday. He said their M-16 assault rifles were for personal protection although Pentagon rules say they can only carry side arms.

Weinberger, who was in Jordan at the end of a Middle East tour, spoker after President Ronald Reagan asked for a report on the men and their weapons. The five are among U.S. soldiers advising government forces fighting a civil war against leftist forces in the central Weinberger told reporters: "I do not doubt they have been carrying personal protection weapons which are essential for anyone in many areas of the world." Reagan made a similar statement Friday and said it was understandable that the men should be armed. The incident is being investigated by the Pentagon and the State Department.

A Pentagon statement said the advisers, a warrant officer and four enlisted men, were not involved in combat or accompanying Salvadoran combat forces. The White House said the five men were training government troops to build pontoon bridges in an area where leftists were active.

In talks with Haig Romania deplores sanctions

BUCHAREST, Romania, Feb. 13 (AP) — U.S. Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig said Saturday Romanian President Nicolae Ceausescu thinks the United States is making a mistake by imposing economic sanctions on Poland. He also said the Romanian president sees some justification for the martial law crackdown.

But Haig said Ceausescu did not raise objections to U.S. sanctions against the Soviet Union, saying the Romanian president didn't discuss them at all.

Haig said he met for 4½ hours with Ceausescu for discussions he said were "cordial and with the same degree of frankness that has characterized discussions between our two governments over a decade." But Haig said "tactical differences" emerged on how best to deal with the Dec. 13 martial law crackdown in Poland.

He said Ceausescu felt "sanctions against the Polish government might be counterproductive in the current environment." He also said Ceausescu "sees greater justification than we would see from the U.S. point of view" on the imposition of martial law itself.

Haig told a news conference prior to his departure from Bucharest that there was very little discussion of the Soviet involvement in events in Poland. The Reagan administration accuses Moscow of being responsible for the military crackdown.

"It was a one-sided discussion in which I laid out very clearly the facts the United States has on Soviet involvement," Haig said. But he indicated Ceausescu did not respond to his presentation. Although Romania is a member of the Warsaw Pact, Ceausescu pursues a foreign policy that is often independent of Moscow's.

Haig said he gave Ceausescu a letter from President Ronald Reagan that Reagan had sent in response to a letter Ceausescu had written to him. Haig said the letters "dealt with the current situation in Poland," but wouldn't elaborate further.

While there was disagreement over sanctions. Haig said there was "a general convergence of view on the need for normalization, immediate" normalization, of the situation in Poland, to include lifting of martial law and the state of seige."

He also said at another point that the disagreement on sanctions was "just a minor difference." But if Haig had come here seeking Romania's support for U.S. policies in the Polish crisis, he certainly didn't achieve his objective.
